

Roar, Roar, DINOSAURS!

The background features a vibrant prehistoric landscape with rolling green hills, a blue sky with soft clouds, and various plants like ferns and a small tree. Several dinosaurs are depicted: a purple and orange long-necked dinosaur on the left, a yellow and brown spotted long-necked dinosaur on the right, a brown and yellow spotted T-Rex in the foreground, and a green and purple dinosaur at the bottom left. A large, stylized green dinosaur head is visible in the top right corner.

Roar! There were so many kinds of dinosaurs.

They did not look the same. They did not act the same.

Some would hunt in a pack. They would work as a group.

Some would hunt with no pals. They did not like to share. They ate raw meat.

Some had tall necks
and long tails. They would eat from trees.

Some were squat, but they were fast and
had sharp claws.

Dinosaurs that ate plants would graze all of the time, like cows.

Some dinosaurs ate both plants
and meat.

Some went on four legs but could stand up and use their front ones to grasp.

Some went on two legs. Their arms were not much help, but their jaws were strong.

We can guess
at the way that they lived from
their body
parts.

Give a roar for dinosaurs! They all fill us with awe.
