

SMOG

Panha lives in a town with a lot of smog. She wants to know if the sky has always been like that.

Her dad tells her that there was no smog when he was a boy. He says that the sun used to shine down on them.

Panha walks to the top of a very tall hill. She sees how the smog floats from the factories into the sky. It thins out on the hill. There is sun!

She goes to her dad's workshop. She needs to make some sort of transport that can take her up high in the sky.

Panha makes a plane! She tries to fly it straight, but it breaks in transit. She gets stuck in a palm tree, but she makes it down.

Panha works on her plane. Her dad gives her some tips. She thinks about the best ways to make the energy transfer.

It is time to try again. The whole town comes out to watch Panha fly. They wish her the best of luck.

The plane takes to the sky very well.
Panha waves down at her dad as she sails through the air. Then she heads up.

When Panha gets up to the sun, it tells her that the smog is stopping its light from reaching the town. They will need to change their ways.

Panha transmits a message down to the ground that she is coming back. She tells the whole town about what they need to do.

The town has done a great job! They have changed the way that they live. The whole town is in good health now.

Panha starts on her next plane. She wants to fly from town to town and spread the word. She can change the world, one town at a time.
